SIGNIFICANT DATES

Dates relate to magical theories through astrology (see above), and also through symbolism.

Magical Dates

The following are some dates with deeply traditional and possibly supernatural significance in Western traditions, along with some associated decans for those using decanic modifiers (see above).

Yule: The winter solstice (usually around December 21), the shortest day of the year; traditionally, the birthday of kings. (Alleborith, Phthenoth)

Imbolc or Candlemas: The harbinger of spring, the beginnings of light and fertility; February 1. (Kumeatêl, Phoubêl, Saphathoraél)

Ostara: The vernal equinox (usually around March 21), the official beginning of spring when the day and night are in balance.
(Alleborith, Charchnoumis, Harpax)

Walpurgisnacht: May Eve (April 30), a day when the dead walk and winter takes its last blows. (Iudal, Kumeatêl, Kurtaêl)

Beltane or Roodmas: The feast of fire and love, May Day. (Anatreth, Eneuth, Kumeatêl)

Litha: The summer solstice (usually around June 21), the longest day of the year. (Alleborith, Methiax, Phoubêl)

Lughnasadh or Lammas: A solar feast of first harvest and marriage; August 1. (Isrö, Kumeatêl, Naôth)

Mabon: The autumnal equinox (usually around September 21), the second harvest and the official end of summer, balancing again the day and night. (Alleborith, Atrax, Bianakith)

Samhain or Halloween: The feast of the dead, and the beginning of winter; October 31. (Ieropaêl, Iudal, Kumeatêl, Kurtaêl)
